His Glowing Words In Praise of the Fallen and Honored President.

WAS A MEMORIAL ADDRESS

Popular Craze Heard at the Methodist Church By a Large Crowd Thursday.

IT WAS A VERY FINE TRIBUTE

The accompanying is the address delivered at the memorial services at the Broadway Methodist church Thursday by Hon. E. W. Bagby, one of Paducah's brainiest and most brilliant men, and one of her most eloquent orators:

Friends and Fellow Citizens: Being absent from the city at the time it was determined by the citizens of Paducah that I should address you on this sorrowful occasion, and having only a few hours in which to gather material requisite for proper discourse upon so important a subject, I shall undertake the task assigned me with many misgivings of my competency. And knowing the difficulty I shall have in representing my own emotions I shall ask you to pardon any limitation of utterance you may observe in this feeble address.

This is one of those rare occasions, when the sympathy of a great nation is close akin to those tender feelings generally confined alone to private life. Under any circumstances the assassination of a great ruler would be a mournful catastrophe, but the life and character of the beloved form, which lies in state today at the city of Canton, is conspicuous for virtues which appeal so strongly to the hearts of all the people, that the pomp and ceremony, which usually attend the funeral of one so exalted and renowned, are obscured and forgotten, and men, women and children bow in deepest agony of sincere distress, and each feels as if some one of his own dear household had forever departed.

My own feelings are so deeply affected by this overwhelming sorrow which I know so grievously afflicts you all, that I must postpone to a more favorable time any extended discussion of the influences which have conspired to produce a life so eminent in those virtues which have distinguished the noblest representatives of the human race. His resplendent life is not a pyramid, which narrows toward the top, but a straight shaft of solid granite, that towers in uniform strength and beauty from base to summit. There in all its majestic dignity it stands, as if some divine architect had modeled its proportions, while a morning nation with tearful eyes upon it looks and weeps, and meanwhile seeks to learn the secret of so grand a life. A life which is the embodiment of the self-reliance, courage and hope of a great people. Never has the spirit of confidence so generally prevailed throughout the republic as during the administration of President McKinley. Confidence, not only in the country's material prosperity, but confidence in all social relations, confidence, that no matter what betides, a strong and faithful ruler guides safely the destiny of his people. What is it that has inspired this confidence more surely than the high moral qualities exhibited in the sterling character and conduct of the president? Moral qualities which will be attributed by some to his early religious training, by intimate friends to the sincere friendship for all his countrymen, but to the people at large, his truly enlightened judgment, his lion-hearted courage, his great forbearance, patience and gentleness, will appear the most potent elements in the shaping of his admirable career. All of this signifies that he derived his strength from many sources. Could he come back and tell us now from whence his many manly virtues came, I doubt not he would point with pride to the teachings of her, at whose side in days long gone he sat and listened, and here obtained the inspiration which stimulated him in all his future greatness.

With what commendable modesty and simplicity he has fulfilled the duties of the high and responsible station to which he was called. Never has his exalted station seemed to divert him from that sense of democratic equality and simplicity, which placed him so gracefully as a man on a level in common with his fellow men. What ruler in ancient or modern times has given to the world more striking lessons of gentleness and forbearance in moments of great public concern. Patience under stress and storm, patience in the face of fierce opposition, patience with the mistakes and follies of ignorance—this is a virtue which comes from discipline under long moral culture. It is the virtue which distinguishes civilization from barbarism. There is nothing reveals genuine character like the exercise of power. It is easy for the helpless and irresponsible to be gentle, and most persons bear adversity becomingly, because they cannot avoid it. But to take the real measure of a man give him power. In every instance where this supreme test has been applied to the president he has invariably met every requirement. When the clamorous appeals of conflicting demands have invoked the application of his executive power a quantity has always accompanied promptness of action. Doubtless much of this quality in his character was due to large toleration, inspired by his abundant confidence in men. This unsuspecting reliance upon those he was so faithfully serving made him manifest of the common precautions required for his own protection, and in a moment when he least looked for any violent design upon his person, when in his simple, manly way he was manifesting his usual spirit of kindness, sympathy and trust toward the people he so fondly loved, he was basely betrayed into his death by the dastardly wretch who killed him.

In its effort to account for this foul deed the nation stands aghast in its perplexity, and bewildered at the consequences. The great alarm is, that the devilish teaching which provoked this most monstrous crime can impress its feeble-minded dupes with the deception, that such a heinous deed will be rewarded with a heavenly blessing and some sort of human approbation. Within the period of one generation three of the country's greatest rulers have been the victims of assassination. Within that time the people have by their ballots elected seven presidents, three of whom have been assassinated. One was the victim of passions influenced by the heat of a great national and sectional conflict, but the act of the assassin was deplored by men both north and south. One was destroyed by a man whose reason had become unbalanced by the partial and ill-impelled by insane greed for office. The last was killed by a man whose feeble intelligence was corrupted by the venomous social doctrines originating in the semi-centers of Europe. It is a murderous record the like of which is unsurpassed by the criminal annals of any modern state. It is natural that the popular feeling should express itself with passionate emphasis in the determination to seek the cause of so great evil, and find the remedy for its suppression. It is a serious question after such a deplorable experience whether the fundamental law of the nation is not too liberal. The constitution of the United States provides that "Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech and of the press." And the courts, in order to shield society against the bad effects of a too liberal application of the declaration, have found it necessary to determine that in certain instances the broad privilege here granted may be abused, that the present temper of the American people will no longer leave to doubtful judicial construction the application of this liberal constitutional enactment, and they will immediately and vigorously demand such legislation as will give to the country a well defined and clearly expressed enactment, declaring that every hostile act upon the chief magistrate of the nation or of any state, and every utterance counselling the same, be visited with the most severe penalties. "One thing we need," said Mr. Jefferson, "to make us a free and prosperous people is, a government which will restrain men from injuring one another. It is the sum of good government, and it is necessary to close the circle of our felicities." The minds of thinking men now busy with the effort to learn the cause which has impelled to this cowardly deed, and to what extent such a law shall be made operative in order to reach the gigantic evil, which has so sorely afflicted the American people.

The political conduct of the average man is largely the product of the prevailing opinion of the community in the locality where he resides, and this opinion is created and manifested through various avenues of expression, the most influential of which are the newspapers and the periodical press. It has been truthfully said, that "newspapers make and unmake men." The thoughtful opinion daily expressed in the columns of the press is one of the most powerful auxiliaries of good government. Efficient administration of law is largely due to the attitude of an enlightened and courageous press. And it is just as powerful in the pre-creation of social evil. The political evil which the public press is so well equipped to multiply are most conspicuous during the state and national elections, when excess of party feeling prompts to extreme bitterness of statement concerning the character and conduct of political opponents and exaggerated caricatures of opposing candidates, who a cooler and better estimate of the person opposed seldom justifies. Notwithstanding the evils from hasty and ill-considered utterances and statements in the press and from the platform, appearing at every race-

THE WEEK'S NEWS IN TRADE CIRCLES

Clearings this week, $487,549. Same time last year, $451,149. Increase $36,399. The bank clearings for the week with one holiday show a substantial increase over the same week in last year. The business with the local financial institutions is very good. Deposits have shown a little shrinkage but present demand for money is about normal. Business all over the country has been very light the past week on account of Mr. McKinley's death. A notable factor in the market, however, has been the great strength of all stocks and the confidence the country has in the new president and his administration. It seems to be the universal opinion that Mr. Roosevelt will give the country one of the best

DEMAREE DIED. RAILROAD NOTES.

He Never Recovered From Exposure and Neglect.

Came From A Prominent Kentucky Family—Lived At Louisville.

William Demaree, of Louisville, who was 57 years old and one of the best known characters about the Falls City, died in the city hospital here last night from general debility and the effects of his recent experience in lying half starved on the river front without food for several days.

He had no feet, having lost them by a fall, and was sent to Mound City from here, and from there to Cairo. The city authorities at Cairo shipped him back here by the first boat, and he lay on the river front under a boiler for two or three days without food, and perfectly helpless before he was discovered. City Physician Sanders ordered him to the city hospital and there he lingered until death relieved him. He was of a prominent family, and as one of the best known young men of Louisville, had been related to strong drink, and had the reputation of having spent in recent years more time in the workhouse than any other man in Louisville.

The remains will probably be buried here in Potter's field.

HALETTE SINKS

She Went Down Near New Madrid, Mo., Yesterday.

Capt. Dorr, the Pilot, Here This Morning on His Way to Take Charge.

The steamer Hallette, which was repaired on the dry docks here about two weeks ago, sank yesterday near New Madrid, Mo. She was brought up from Mississippi river, and when she was let off the docks was as good as new.

None of the particulars of the sinking are known, but Captain Harry Dorr the pilot, who was in Cincinnati arrived this morning and went to Cairo on the Dick Fowler to take charge of the wreck, and see what steps can be taken to raise her. The boat was in the cotton trade, and was worth about $10,000, and no doubt well insured.

INQUIRY COURT

One of Schley's Reports Openly Contradicted This Morning.

A WRANGLE YESTERDAY

A Reply of Rear Admiral Higginson Ordered by the Court Stricken as Inadmissible.

OTHER WITNESSES TESTIFY

Washington, Sept. 21.—Admiral Schley's friends have not much cause for rejoicing thus far over the way things are going in the court of inquiry which he demanded. The first witness this morning was Captain Harber, of the battleship Texas, who in his evidence before the board openly contradicted the statement in Admiral Schley's report as to signals and weather conditions at Cienfuegos. Yesterday Rear Admiral Higginson testified at length. He told in reply to questions of the presence of the collier Morrill, and of the departure from Cienfuegos and the arrival at Santiago on the evening of the 28th. In reply to questions he said that the Massachusetts had at that time taken on about 130 tons of coal, but that as the weather was rough this was done with difficulty.

The witness also told of the fleets leaving Santiago for Key West on the night of its arrival at the former place, and of how after steaming westward for some time the vessels all in response to commodore's signals, returned and steamed to within two or three miles of the month of the harbor. "What happened to cause the decision to return to Key West?" the witness was asked. "I don't know," was the reply. "What was the condition of the weather at the time for coaling at sea?" "It was not impossible to coal, I think."

Towards the close yesterday the court announced that it had some questions of its own to ask. These were written, and the first was concerning the elevation of the guns during the bombardment of the Colon on May 31. The reply was that at first they were 7,800 feet and later 9,000 feet.

The next question was as to whether there was any place of shelter near Santiago where the flying squadron could have coaled upon its arrival at Santiago?

Admiral Higginson replied that Guantanamo was only fifty miles to the east.

The third question, coming as it did from the court, created something of a sensation, which was added to by the reply. The question was: "Was every effort made by Admiral Schley to destroy or capture the Spanish steamer Colon as she lay at anchor in the harbor at Santiago between the 27th and 31st of May?" "Object, object," came from each of Admiral Schley's counsel, but before a halt could be made the witness had replied: "I don't think it was."

The question and the reply led to a long controversy. Judge Wilson and Mr. Rayner both gave reasons for their objections. They contended that the questions called for the opinion of the witness, whereas only facts were admissible. Finally the court decided that no opinions were admissible and the Rear Admiral's reply was stricken. A number of other witnesses were called to testify as to the feasibility of coaling at sea, and all seemed to think that it was possible on the occasion. Capt. Harber's memory proved bad and he grew angry under the interrogation of Schley's counsel. At noon recess was taken, and Rear Admiral Higginson was recalled to correct some statements made yesterday.

STILL ENCOURAGING.

Canton, Ohio, Sept. 21.—Mrs. McKinley is going driving again today and seems to be much improved. Dr. Rixey is much encouraged.

NO SECTION.

Washington, Sept. 21.—President Roosevelt said to some southern congressmen who called today: "I know no Mason and Dixon's line. It is my desire to be president of the people. I never believed in sectionalism."

ADJOURNED UNTIL MONDAY

They were five members of the Republican city committee present at the meeting called for last night, but owing to the fact that some of the committeemen were unable to leave their business because of the pay train's arrival, the meeting was adjourned until Monday night.

HIS PARTNER ARRESTED

Lee Stanford Says That Stewart Was Drunk and Shooting at Other Negroes.

PROCEEDINGS OF POLICE COURT

The name of the man who fired the shot that penetrated Street Inspector Utterback's home at Fifth and Madison streets night before last has been learned and if caught he will be prosecuted. Lee Stanford, colored, was arrested last night for being implicated in the shooting, and when closely questioned admitted that he was with the negro who did the shooting, and that the name of the negro is John Stewart. The police have been unable to locate Stewart.

Stanford claims that he was taking Stewart, who was drunk, home, when Stewart got into an altercation with negroes whose names the police have not ascertained, and shot three times at them. One bullet went through a front window at Mr. Utterback's and one near striking Mrs. Utterback, who had just entered the room in response to a call from one of the children.

The case against Stanford was called this morning in the police court and continued, and the prisoner was committed to jail.

Will Gordon, colored, was arrested last night on a charge of maliciously assaulting his mother-in-law at Eighth and Harrison streets. He is crippled, and knocked her down with one of his crutches. The case against him was continued until Monday.

Two farmers who seemed the worst for wear, W. O. Willis and W. R. Mosely, were fined $1 each each for drunkenness.

The accompanying is the address delivered at the memorial service at the Broadway Methodist church Thursday by Hon. E. W. Bagby, one of Paducah's truest and most brilliant men, and one of her most eloquent orators.

Friends and Fellow Citizens: Being absent from the city at the time it was determined by the citizens of Paducah that I should address you on this sorrowful occasion, and having only a few hours in which to gather material requisite for proper discourse upon an important subject, I shall undertake the task assigned me with many misgivings of my competency. NOTES OF THE MEETING

The Paducah Gun club's tournament was a success. The visitors were all well pleased, and left for home satisfied. The Paducah boys divided honors in every event. Not a visitor outshot them. In every match the visitors were tied for first, second and third money.

The contest for the handsome loving cup donated by Nagel and Meyer, the Starr brothers tied, and will have to shoot it off. Their shooting was a feature of the meet. There can't anyone touch them, but Mr. H. C. Bronaugh came close behind them, being only one bird below their score.

The cup will every year go to the member of the gun club having the largest score, and if any one member holds it for three successive years it becomes his property. Owing to a shortage in live birds and the lack of time, the two live bird events were curtailed yesterday afternoon.

Ex-State Champion Gay created much amusement with his shooting yesterday afternoon. When he was uncertain that his bird was dead he stood several times at his post with a very steady expression in his eyes undecided whether or not to run for the pigeon. The attitude he struck brought a laugh from the ladies and he then kept up his position solely for the amusement of the visitors. He made fun for the crowd and several times came near giving the joke away by laughing. Very few knew that he was "joking" the crowd which made the fun the more enjoyable.

Several small boys would not keep within the limit and came near being shot several times. They were at length captured and made to stand behind the shooters. When a pigeon was wounded they would run around the fence chasing the bird and several times came within range of the marksmen.

The marksmen were at the Palmer last night discussing the tournament. Every one pronounced it one of the most successful ever held in the state. The hospitality could not be outdone and every convenience was afforded the delegates. There was no trouble whatever in effecting a settlement and no accidents of any serious nature occurred during the two days the tournament continued. The only accident that happened at all was the premature explosion of a cartridge which Mr. Hal Walters was placing in his gun. His finger nail was injured by the explosion but it did not interfere with his shooting.

The shooting of Dr. Duncan, of Louisville, was a feature of the meet and he is known as one of the surest and most graceful shooters in the state. He shoots in rapid succession and rarely misses his bird. Several shooters entered the live bird match and made a good showing comparatively, for they had never before shot at live birds and had confined their shooting to clay birds thrown out by the tray. Trimble, the man who did such phenomenal shooting at the inanimate targets did not participate in the live bird shooting as he does not shoot in such matches. He has a reputation as one of the best clay pigeon shots in the country and his shooting here was a fair example of what he could do in this line. The guns he advertised could not have been better exhibited and many were used in the shoot.

One of Schley's Reports Openly Contradicted This Morning.

Washington, Sept. 21.—Admiral Schley's friends have not much cause for rejoicing that for the way things are going in the court of inquiry which he demanded. The first witness this morning was Captain Harber, of the battleship Texas, who in his evidence before the board openly contradicted the statement in Admiral Schley's report as to signals and weather conditions at Cienfuegos.

Yesterday Rear Admiral Higginson testified at length. He told in reply to questions of the presence of the collier Merrimac, and of the departure from Cienfuegos and the arrival at Santiago on the evening of the 26th, in reply to questions he said that the Merrimac had at that time taken on about 150 tons of coal, but that as the weather was rough this was done with difficulty.

Admiral Higginson replied that Guantanamo was only forty miles to the east.

The third question, coming as it did from the court, created something of a sensation, which was added to by the reply. The question was: "Was every effort made by Admiral Schley to destroy or capture the Spanish steamer Colon as she lay at anchor in the harbor at Santiago between the 27th and 31st of May?"

THE PROSPECTIVE ROW

The prospects for a row in the meeting of the Democratic county committee, if there is one next Wednesday afternoon, are very good. Chairman Emery and Secretary Eaton will not attend. They claim that the matter which Mr. Potter has called the committee to settle was decided by the committee weeks ago, when there was no dispute over the chairmanship, and that Mr. F. F. Gholson, whose nomination Mr. Hartley was contesting, holds a certificate now on record to the county clerk's office, awarding him the nomination, and signed by Mr. Potter as chairman and Mr. Eaton as secretary.

It remains to be seen how Mr. Potter can go back on the decision of his own committee, when he was chairman signed the certificate and there was no controversy.

The Emery faction claim that the Potter faction have been setting out to the members of the committee, letters threatening them with fine and imprisonment for a failure to attend the meeting which Mr. Potter has called for Wednesday, signing himself the chairman.

Standford claims that he was taking Stewart, who was drunk, home, when Stewart got into an altercation with negroes whose names the police have not ascertained, and shot three times at them. One bullet went through a front window at Mr. Utterback's and came near striking Mrs. Utterback, who had just entered the room in response to a call from one of the children.

The case against Standford was called this morning in the police court and continued, and the prisoner was committed to jail.

Will Gordon, colored, was arrested last night on a charge of maliciously assaulting his mother-in-law at Eighth and Harrison streets. He is crippled, and knocked her down with one of his crutches. The case against him was continued until Monday.

Two farmers who seemed the worst for wear, W. O. Willis and W. R. Mosely, were fined $1 each each for drunkenness.

DAILY THOUGHT.

"We may deny justice to the living, but we are fairly generous to the unreplying dead."

The Louisville Commercial, under the caption "The State Plundered," says:

"The Democratic defeated candidates who have usurped the state offices to which the people elected the Republicans, are pursuing the same tactics that were employed by the old Frankfort ring prior to 1896. Then the Democrats plundered the school fund and when that was exhausted they went into the sinking fund, the sacred guaranty of the public credit. They went out of office with state warrants being hawked about among claim shavers and the public credit reduced to a pitiable plight."

"The Republicans restored the state's credit and kept the sinking fund intact. The Democrats, since they usurped the state government, have reduced the state's cash about $400,000, or a little more than $500,000 a year. This exceeds the record for the five years preceding Gov. Bradley's election, during which the state only got in debt at the rate of $250,000 a year. But the purchase of pardoned testimony to 'hang Taylor and damn the Republican party' comes high. Dick Tate was a more modest robber than his successors."

Mr. W. J. Bryan might find much that applies to himself in the general indictment of the yellow press for creating strife and breeding discord in the breasts of the ignorant. He seems to feel the embarrassment of his position in the universal denunciation that has been hurled at every thing that might have had a tendency to inspire such a crime as the assassination of the head of our government, and in a memorial day address, said significantly: "It is unfortunate that in the heat of political controversy partisanship sometimes becomes so strong as to cause injustice to be done the motives of political opponents, and it should be our constant aim to place our campaigns upon so high a plane that personalities will be eliminated and the issues made to turn upon the principles involved. Let us hope that this national affliction which unites all factions in a common sorrow will result in a broader charity and more liberal spirit among those who by different policies and through different parties seek to promote the welfare and increase the glory of our common country." If Mr. Bryan follows his own advice, much of the evil he mentions will be eliminated.

Senator Wellington, of Maryland, who has been denounced by the people in his own state because of the indifference he displayed over the assassination of President McKinley, sees the handwriting on the wall. In a letter written to a friend at Washington, he denies giving out any interviews, claiming that he again and again refused to say anything for publication "for the reason that McKinley had done me such an injury I could not forgive and that I felt it would be better to say nothing at this time." He adds: "As to the crime of Osage, I hardly think it necessary in say that, like yourself, I abhor an assassin, and I am as much appalled at the crime, which struck down President McKinley as one of his warmest friends. I do not think that any one who knows me would for a moment believe that I would look with indifference upon an act of this kind." Senator Wellington has waited most too long to make his half-hearted apologies.

The Republicans will certainly put out a city ticket. This is given for the benefit of any Doubting Thomas who may be worried to know just what the republicans are going to do. The republicans will have a platform for the coming municipal campaign that every public spirited citizen can and will endorse, and will take a firm stand on all questions of interest to the people of Paducah. If the democrats expect to be in the race, they will have to show their colors.

The cost of the steel strike, in two months and a half, has been ten millions of dollars to the strikers, and fifteen millions to the steel magnates. Much of the latter, however, will be made up in the increased price of steel and other productions. The Amalgamated Association carried 9000 out of 14,000 men into the strike and it is estimated has lost recognition for about 2500 of them. The actual number of men who joined the strikers, however, was 20,000.

There is quite a demand for the position of Lord High Executioner of Osage, Capt. Christian Roth, of Jackson, Mich., who conducted the execution of the conspirators in the assassination of President Lincoln, wants to pull the switch that sent President McKinley's assassin into eternity, and has made formal application. There are others, doubtless, who are equally as anxious, but he hoped there will be no hard feelings over the distinction sought.

As a result of the recent newspaper deal removing the Evening News, the city council will have to elect a new city printer. He must be the proprietor or general manager of some daily newspaper. Formerly the paper with the largest circulation got the public printing, and if this law were now in force the Sun would get it.

Paducah orators are equal to any occasion, and the various addresses and eulogies that have been delivered here since the assassination of the president were unexcelled by none in any city of the United States, and are credited to Paducah as well as to the gentlemen who delivered them.

Memphis feels her importance just now. The "horse laugh," which not long ago attracted considerable attention by reason of its prevalence in Chicago, has struck the Bluff City.

As stated several days ago, four other suits have been filed against Capt. Baner, in the Livingston circuit court, for $2,000 each by F. G. Randolph, administrator of the estate of Mrs. W. A. Hogao and three children, who were also drowned.

Observations ...at Random

There are a good many men who are lying out under the slash and mud today because they tried to please everybody, says an exchange. When they started out in life they made up their minds that everybody should be satisfied with them, but they didn't succeed in making anybody happy but the undertaker. The world is full of fault-finders and grumblers and a man can't walk five minutes in any given direction without meeting them. Even when he turns his face to the wall, kicks the foot of the bed and explores, there are some people who find fault with the action. Some will say he ought to have done it 25 years ago, while others will insist that he ought to have waited a little longer for the sake of his family. The man who jogs along from day to day and does his best regardless of what people will say is the one who is the hardest to kill, and when at last he does die there are about as many bouquets laid on his coffin as there are on the casket of the man who worried himself into Abraham's bosom.

Boats that ply in Southern waters are having a great deal of trouble getting rosters. They have been paying at the rate of $150 a month, $1 a day, and have been unable to get them even at that price. Some of the boats that toiled at Cairo, according to efforts on the Elk River, have every conceivable kind of deckhand. Many of them have but one arm, while some are crippled and hardly able to get around. They are largely negroes who can get no other kind of work. The roster on the Mississippi river seems to have things going his way, and does not have to work unless he wants to. A few weeks at the rate that has been paid makes him independently rich for some time, and he quits work until his money runs out.

The manifestations of prisoners when released from prison are many and varied. Upst Smithland the other day a couple of Paducah women had been in for several weeks were brought into court and told they could go. They were too surprised to do anything immediately, but finally both began to grin, and then one arose, gave her skirts a twist and bolted for the door without a word. The prospect of long delayed liberty was too much for her. She rushed out to make sure it was not a dream and wasn't seen any more until the boat that was to bring her to Paducah arrived.

Mayfield expects to have a carnival that will attract people from far and near, and as the Elks will have it in charge, it is safe to predict that there will be no disappointment. It is to be in the latter part of the coming month, and the members of the Mayfield Lodge are losing no time in getting ready for it. There has been no carnival or street fair in this part of the state since the Paducah Elks gave their carnival in May, and the time is Judge Jere Wilson, one of the counsel for Admiral Schley, is known to the foremost ranks of lawyers at the national capital, where he has been identified with numerous important cases that have attracted attention during the past quarter of a century, says an exchange.

He is a keen reader of human nature, and studies his jury with the same care he bestows on the preparation of his cases.

Some years ago he was defending a contractor accused of defrauding the government, and as the case developed, the law and the testimony seemed to be closing around his client. The prosecutor, anticipating victory, was elated, and the presiding judge could scarcely conceal his satisfaction. But when Mr. Wilson made his appeal to the jury, he calculated said wore a brighter crown of glory than that with which he invested his client.

The judge's charge was not auspicious for the defendant, but the jury remanded out a surprisingly short time. "We find the defendant not guilty," they reported.

Judge and prosecutor were astonished. The judge, addressing the defendant, said:

"Though it is my painful duty to discharge you, I cannot refrain from congratulating you upon having retained so eloquent an advocate."

Turning to the jury, the Court added:

"But it gives me pleasure to discharge you, for a more unbecomingly jury never dragged a verdict through a temple of justice."

The Week in Society.

The Doings of the Smart Set the Past Six Days. Pleasant Events and Personal Mention.

MRS. McKINLEY'S

FAVORITE POEM.

God gives us love, something to love
He gives us, but when that love is
To ripeness, that on which it thrives
Falls off, and love is left alone.
Sleep sweetly, tender heart, in peace
Sleep, holy spirit, blessed soul,
While the stars burn, the moons in
And the great ages onward roll.
Sleep to the end, true soul and sweet
Nothing comes to thee new or Lie still, dry dust, secure of change.

SOCIETY'S REVERENT PAUSE.

An impressive stillness has pervaded Society this week. It is not lassitude, or indifference, or ennui; it is not the quietude of any of these, but it is the pause of reverence, that stillness that is so distinctly felt and any one who was within the radius of that five minute pause, observed at 3 p. m. on September 19, will understand how stillness can be felt. So it is, as if Society had let alone all gaiety this week to stand by the bier of the ruler of the nation, and do him the last honor. It is certainly true that some such duty should be shown in this solemn hour, but the remarkable thing is that there is no duty-feeling connected with it, aside to those who knew and loved him and to those who knew him and yet loved him, the desire has been to have some share in paying him honor. Perhaps never was a sorrow so universal, it has impartially touched all classes, from Society turning aside from her paths of pleasure, to the little bootblack who unable to buy the picture of President McKinley that he longed for in one of the shop windows, offered to "shine" the proprietor's shoes for a year in payment for it. All have shown marked grief for "the well beloved of the presidents." And what has made this so universal? Not being president? No, regret and horror would have been felt, but not necessarily heart grief. Not the great statesman? No, they have been admired but not so sincerely loved. It was not only the president and the great man, but the human, lovable man, the Christian man, the gallant gentleman, the chivalrous lover and husband, the "leader of men and the lover of children." Yes, William McKinley, gentleman, one would call him, for gallantly he has "borne" without reproach the great old name of gentleman. While all our presidents have been in some way or other remarkable men, it has been opportune often that made them president, and they have been men of the strenuous life, but it was this man's grace and glory that while engaged in the warfare of life, he never neglected the amenities of life. In public and private he made his simple Christianity felt, but never antagonistically, and has been styled the modern Sir Galahad. And as for her who stands alone today, sweet and noble lady, trying to be brave "for the Major's sake," whose heart in all her country has not gone out to her in a sympathy too deep for mere words?

Some way this gallant gentleman and his gentle lady recall a little poem "At the Scaffold Stair," some of that evanescent magazine poetry, but with a haunting charm about it, nevertheless. Do you know it? Well, here it is, now read it and see if you do not catch the echo of the same fine spirit of chivalry in this twentieth century tragedy of ours. Would not he who has just left us have bowed with as courtly a grace and have sought "to hush" the way for her? And would not her brave desire have been to cheer him on with the words that today must be her only comfort, "This is a moment that we part?"

"With face of gold upon his coat,
And powder on his wavy hair,
A courtly smile upon his lip,
He passed beside the scaffold stair

THE HEADMAN WAITED, COWLED AND GRIM.

With stains of crimson on his sark;
But o'er her slender hand he bent,
"Let me go first, the way is dark."
She wore a filmy kerchief crossed,
A flowered gown of rich brocade;
Her silken slippers, sewn with pearls,
Till prison floors were soiled and frayed.
When last they met his ribboned into
Made music in a moonlit park;
But now their love had come to this,
"Let me go first, the way is dark."
She gathered close the kerchief's fold,
To hide the beating of her heart;
But answered softly as he went,
"Tis but a moment that we part."
The crowd grew dim, and far away,
She seemed to hear a morning lark;
And all his song was set to words—
"Let me go first, the way is dark."

THE AMERICAN TYPE.

T. P. O'Connor has published in "Manly About People," a London weekly society paper, some of the most interesting of his recollections of his meetings with President McKinley at Washington. The concluding words should adorn the walls of every American home, and should be graven in the hearts of the people. They are something to make us glad we are Americans, and something to live up to:

"The career of McKinley was typically American. It is, indeed, American at its best. Even the murmured words of the church hymn which were among the last things uttered by the dying life—even that is typically American, too. Amid all the riot, blaze and deafening noise of a country bursting with the abounding vitality and defiant strength of its gigantic youth, America is in its foundation a country of tranquil, sober, fast-forward homes. Every individual American mourns in simple William McKinley the sweetness, wholesomeness and faithful affection and fidelity of the typical American citizen—the true American man and husband, the true American wife and the typical American home."

A PRETTY MORN'G.

The social event of the week was the marriage of Miss Alice Sanders to Mr. Charles James Kiger, on Tuesday morning. It was quite a pretty church wedding, and occurred at the First Presbyterian church, which was attractively decorated in palms for the occasion, and was early filled with the friends and relatives of the popular couple. The ceremony was impressively performed by Dr. W. E. Cave. The bride wore an artistic tailor-made gown of blue cloth and looked very handsome.

The ushers were: Mr. Richard Rudy, Mr. Maurice H. Nash, Jr., Mr. Gus Thompson, Mr. Will Sanders, Mr. W. B. McPherson, Mr. Charles R. Kiger, of Louisville, and Mr. Charles P. Jones, of Evansville, and Mr. Frank Riecke.

After an informal reception at the home of the bride's parents, Judge and Mrs. David L. Sanders, on Jefferson street, Mr. and Mrs. Kiger left at 11:40 for Buffalo, New York City, various eastern cities and Wisconsin. After three weeks they will be at home at the Palmer House, Paducah, Ky. Mr. and Mrs. Kiger are too well known to need any words of introduction in these columns, both being very popular in society. They have the best wishes of a host of friends here and elsewhere.

THE OPENING OF

"THE KENTUCKY."
All things come to them who will
But wait, and the event to which Paducah society has been looking forward for months, is now almost at hand. The opening of "The Kentucky" on next Tuesday evening will be the most notable occasion in the annals of Paducah's social history. It will be a gala night indeed, and everybody will be on hand to do it all honor. Nor is this interest confined to Paducah alone. Many are coming from a distance to be present, which will lead additional lustre. The presence of Governor Beckham and a distinguished party from Frankfort, who have signified their intention of coming for the event, will add an interest to the occasion.

Of course Paducah Society will be on dress parade, and every one knows how especially charming her women and how distinguished her men look on such occasions, that they will not miss so notable an opportunity goes without saying.

She will be a boarder at Belmont college, Nashville, this winter.

HON. E. W. BAGBY.

ring popular election, the fathers of the republic have deemed it wise to declare through the highest expression of the popular will and judgment that congressional penalties be affixed to abuses of this well intended law, and provide against a repetition of the deplorable spectacle over which the nation is deeply mortified at this sad hour.

It is a grave mistake to suppose that one bred and born in a foreign land, simply because he can read the constitution and laws, can at once enter into a full realization of the meaning and spirit which underlies free institutions. Our constitutions and laws are not formal declarations of ancient rules of liberty which have grown into a tradition of the race; which have sprung from ages of experience in the struggle for freedom; which have come down to us along with Magna Carta, the Bill of Rights, and other monumental milestones in the progress of the American people from their earliest history. Not every man is made a liberty loving citizen in the twinkling of an eye, or, as it were by any providential interposition or dispensation. A man cannot be made a new born citizen by any marvellous process of regeneration. He is not endowed by any miraculous conceptions of citizenship, because he can simply read the constitution and the laws. People who are free and in love with the institutions of freedom, must be trained in the school of liberty, imbibing its precious precepts from the days of prattling childhood at the hands of patriotic mothers, whose spirits have been nurtured in a land where the very atmosphere is filled with the divine essence of liberty. The principles of civil liberty which underlie the social institutions of the American commonwealth have been consecrated by the most memorable deeds recorded in the annals of the race. Deeds which were animated by impulses which sprang from an enlightened age antedating our colonial existence. It has been truthfully said "that the last pilgrim who set his foot on Plymouth rock stepped forth a living constitution, armed at all points to defend and perpetuate the liberty to which he had devoted his whole being." We have too easily, in our mad zeal for party success, whirled instead of lengthened the probationary period of residence required for citizenship. Our laws in this respect have been so heedlessly enacted we have invited to our shores and thoughtlessly invested with the sacred rights of citizenship the red handed Mafia of Southern Italy, the destructive Poles of Hungary, and all the offshoots of Europe, which feed and fatten on the poisonous teaching of the most degraded forms of communism and anarchy. We have sown the wild oats of our youth, and from their recesses are reaping a harvest of evils. Every man has his political ideals which are the result of a certain civic evolution or development, that have been acquired by the slow growth of experience. People come here from foreign countries with a fancied sort of equality, which Americans never dreamed of. Equality before the law is all that any sane American born citizen expects, equality of condition is impossible. There are in this country some benevolent minded people who would make all equally rich, which would be much the same thing as to make all equally poor. But that fatal spirit of anarchy and communism, which strikes with violent and frenzied force at the heads of government and all the long established forms of civil order, is hardly less to be deplored than that overweening egotism and selfishness of a grasping and heartless commercialism, which steadily undermines the perpetuity of the republic. Both are but different phases of a common evil, and each an enemy of good government. Genuine American citizenship is born of climate and forces, which have been at work on this continent for over two hundred years. To be a true American citizen it is not necessary that a man be born in this country; for many a foreign born citizen has emigrated to this free land that he may enjoy unmolested the privileges of a more enlightened liberty denied to him by the institutions of his native land. Toward such a man the blessings of American citizenship should be generously accorded.

But from this phase of my discourse I turn again to him who is the moving theme of all I have to say. One of the most lamentable features in the tragic end of our beloved president, is the reflection that he goes from us just at the time when he was prepared to realize the full accomplishment of a policy which promises so much for the prosperity of his country. One of his most cherished projects was, the isthmian connection of the two great oceans, the Atlantic and Pacific by way of the Nicaraguan canal. This showing his friendly sympathy with the one central idea, which has dominated the minds of American statesmen of all political creeds. The idea, in the language of a certain illustrious historian, "that upon this continent there shall exist one republic, great and indivisible, which shall eclipse the grandeur of Rome in its brightest days. Sovereign among the nations of the earth. So ruling in wisdom, in truth, in justice, yes, in force if necessary, that every person, no matter how obscure or desolate he may be, shall find in it a refuge and a protector; and that every nation from the Atlantic ocean eastward to the Chinese seas, shall listen with attention to its suggestions."

By this sad spectacle another great act in the drama of American national life is over. There are many good men who look longingly upon the past, expecting its wisdom for return. The past never returns. With our high aspirations, and our enormous military, naval and industrial resources we are warned by the dying president, that we should turn our faces to the future. There is, indeed, a sinistral future before us. There is a course through which, in the severe logic of events, we must go. Let us cast from our minds the illusions, the unworthy belief that the will of man determines the events of this world. National life is shaped by something far higher than that. "For I doubt not through the ages an increasing purpose runs, And the thoughts of men are widened by the process of the suns."

"It is said that during the dark ages there were magical mirrors, upon which if a man looked he could behold all the future events of his life. Nature holds up her enchanted mirror to us, and in the moving images and changing scenery, which recent world-wide movements present, we think we can almost discern what we are about to be."

The great problems of government which remain unsolved crowd thick and fast upon us. The great and good president, who would so ably and lovingly guide us by his friendly counsels in this momentous period of the country's history, is now one of the three immortal martyrs, whose virtues will forever adorn the pages of American history. I look aside here to behold the picture only of his mention and perusal is part, and we love to gaze upon it lovingly once more; but I am reminded that he has left for us a far richer legacy in that image of his soul, which he has stamped in lines of imperishable memory upon the hearts of his countrymen. It needs not the achievements of photography or pictorial art to invoke the best beloved aspect of his dear person, nor artist to paint upon perishable canvases a mimicry of his life-saving life, for an artist can draw a likeness so perfect and admirable as that which his splendid career has impressed upon the mental vision of the world. He has carved his own statue; he has built his own monument; and over his prostrate form Fame stoops, and crowns him with the wreath of immortality.
